

What do you need to live more easily in your home and community?

That's the question York County Community Foundation (YCCF) wants you to answer. They are a charitable organization located in York, PA that is passionate about creating a vibrant community where everyone can thrive.

One way they do this is by carrying on the legacy of donor Anna Gardner, who over 110 years ago gifted her estate to ensure our residents can have the best quality of life possible as we age. Her gift supports YCCF's Embracing Aging initiative that focuses on creating a York County that is a great place to grow older.

This includes:

- Making policy changes that improve accessibility and broaden options on how and where you live
- Connecting you with information, resources, tools, offers and guidance to help plan for or change your aging experience
- Addressing negative thinking about aging, which damages your sense of self, shortens your lifespan and limits your opportunities to do the things you need and desire

YCCF's Embracing Aging invites you to join the movement to make York County a community where all ages can live more easily. Learn more about our work in:

- Building an age-friendly York County at www.yccf.org/age-friendly
- Improving attitudes about aging at www.EmbracingAging.org
- Fueling community transformation by engaging donors, providing community leadership, investing in high-impact initiatives while building endowment for future generations at www.yccf.org

To share what you need or for more information, contact Cathy Bollinger, managing director of Embracing Aging at cbollinger@yccf.org or 717.848.3733

York County Community Foundation • 14 W. Market St. • York, PA 17401-1617 • 717.848.3733